Pricing Policy and Guidelines

2015 Collection Overview

OUP 2015 Journals Collection

Pricing matters

- We believe customers should not pay for a title that has left a publishers Journal Collection ***
- We have reduced customers renewal fees in direct proportion to the value of titles that are leaving us in 2015
- This will protect your budget and ensure allocated funds follow individual titles moving from one publisher to the next as Societies form new partnerships and migrate their titles

OUP 2015 Journals Collection

Pricing matters

- We offer Collection discounts for titles new to institutions
- Subscription fees are reduced according to the number of APCs at journal level for hybrid OA titles
- Our pricing is fair and transparent, ensuring you can effectively budget and manage your journal collections
- OUP is going to continue improving the quality of the collection and selectively add new titles that fit well

OUN 2015 Journals Collection

How do we price customer Collections?

- We calculate customers subscription fees on the following metrics:
 - Like-for-like renewal rate (underlying growth): 2014 Collection price adjusted for titles that have left, and adjusted for external changes, i.e. increased content volume, increased publication frequency
 - Existing revenue spend on new joiners: These titles only require re-allocation of funds, not new budget!
 - Premium fee for new content: for new joiners not previously subscribed, a heavily discounted fee is added

The OUP Difference

The OUP Difference

- OUP is different from every other university press and every commercial press
- No other university press has the resources and online experience that OUP does, and very few commercial presses do either
- We are by far the largest university press in the world
- Commercial presses with comparable experience are almost all publicly owned and traded

The OUP Difference

The OUP advantage v. commercial presses

- OUP is a mission-based organization
- OUP is a highly selective journals publisher
- As a department of the university, OUP will never be sold
- High-quality publishing and the support of academic endeavours

The OUP Difference

The OUP advantage v. university presses

- OUP has one of the very few university press journals programmes large enough to be offered to consortia as a complete collection and archive.
- Giving greater access and value for money.
- OUP is a truly global publisher, with a reach unparalleled among university presses (and most commercial houses), enabling greater savings that can be passed on to libraries and academic communities

The OUP Difference

It's not all about revenue

- While OUP's primary purpose is to pursue the University's educational mission through its global publishing, we do derive a surplus from our publishing activities
- A proportion of any annual surplus is used for a variety of University activities, e.g. the funding of scholarships, funding for early stage researchers, the refurbishment of libraries, and purchase of additional resources for them, and the development of new facilities

What's Next?

The future for OUP journals

- We continue to strive towards a greater global reach, with more international authors
- We will continue to expand our subject coverage
- We will continue to only add high quality titles to our collection
- We aim to add between 10-25 journals each year to our collection
